The Show Closes

The great television quiz show scandal ended yesterday with suspended sentences meted out to dismal "contestants" who once were the glamorous talk of the nation.

Once they had denied to a grand jury that the quizzes were fixed. Later they told a second grand jury the truth. Yesterday’s proceedings were in punishment for their story to the first grand jury.

So closes a chapter of history which could be called “An American Craze of the Late Fifties.” It was a weird business of easily made money and, for yesterday’s contestants, the most expensive dollars they ever will acquire.

Secret of Ford’s Success: ‘Pitch as Hard as I Can’

By STEVE SNIDER

Whitey Ford’s friends still are ‘bugging’ him.

They needled him unmercifully last winter because he never had won 20 games in any season for the New York Yankees but he thought he had them stopped when he wound up 1961 with a spectacular 25-4 record.

“NOW THEY’RE bugging me because I can’t finish,” said the whimsical 33-year-old left-hander.

As the highest paid pitcher in Yankee history, with an estimated $50,000 coming up for ’62, Whitey can afford to joke about that fact that while he started 39 games last year he finished only 11.

“Where would Luis Arroyo be if I finished ‘em all?” he quipped. Arroyo, king of the Yankee relievers, frequently mopped up for Whitey.

ACTUALLY, said Ford, there’s a mighty good reason he can’t go all the way more often.

“When I first came up here they told me to pitch as hard as I could, as long as I could,” he said. “And that’s what I’ve always done. The Yankees always have good relief pitchers and I figure if I can keep the score down for six or seven innings pitching as hard as I can the Yankees will get enough runs to win the game.

“I never did try learning to pace myself and I’m too old to change now.”
