PARIS (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, in his first public speech since his radio farewell to the Empire after abdication last December, announced today he was going to America as a "completely independent observer, without political consideration," but that he hoped to aid in "solving some of the vital problems that beset the world today."
New Jersey Phone Co.
Has Its 10th Birthday

¾ of a Million
Telephones in State.

The New Jersey Bell Telephone Company is observing its tenth anniversary this month. Formation of the state-wide company in October, 1927, preceded a program of service improvement which, the company reports, has cut operating errors in half during the decade; established new standards for speed of connections on all classes of telephone calls; reduced interruptions of service nearly forty per cent., and added large quantities of improved equipment and a million and a half miles of wire to the telephone system.

Prior to 1927 the Delaware and Atlantic Telegraph and Telephone Company furnished service in the southern half of the state, and the New York Telephone Company in the northern part. The increasing importance of New Jersey in industry, population, agriculture, recreation and its strategic location on the eastern seaboard which ensured continued development led to merger of the two properties to afford undivided direction to cope with the telephone problems such growth presented.

To head the new organization Chester I. Barnard came to New Jersey from the post of vice-president in charge of operations of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania and Associated Companies. He has been president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company since its inception, and with few exceptions the management has remained in the same hands throughout the decade.

Shortly after his arrival Mr. Barnard declared, at a meeting of past presidents of the Camden Chamber of Commerce, that "It is clear that New Jersey's growth must continue. What is not so clear, however, is whether the future of New Jersey is to be one of development or merely one of growth; whether it will become a better place to live in or not; whether its industries will be more prosperous or less; whether the wealth and well-being of its inhabitants will be improved; in a word, whether the pressure of population and industry promises for New Jersey merely a vast congestion, uncomfortable, inconvenient and expensive."

So far as the vital service of communication was concerned, the new telephone company set about creating a system adequate for New Jersey's future and designed for the individual needs of the various sections and communities. The number of telephone exchanges was increased from 161 to 196, and the great majority of existing exchanges were modernized with new switchboards and other equipment. Forty new buildings were erected for telephone purposes, including the twenty-story headquarters in Newark. Wide-range dial telephone service enabling users to dial calls direct within an eighteen mile radius in northern New Jersey was installed in the heart of the Newark metropolitan area, and modern dial service was also brought to Atlantic City, Trenton, Paterson and Elizabeth.

About a half-million more calls course through the state-wide telephone system on an average day of 1931 than ten years ago, and the number of telephones, which dropped nearly 100,000 during the depression, is again moving upward. In 1927 there were 571,000 telephones. In 1931 a peak of 655,000 telephones was reached. At the beginning of the fourth quarter of this year the total was 655,000.

NAVY DAY

Navy Day, linked very properly with the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, this year creates interest in the minds of the people because of the unrest in so many parts of the world. Men of the navy are on near-war duty in the now not-so-far east. Out in the Pacific the major portion of our sea fighting force is engaging in war maneuvers to study the latest developments in fighting machinery. Navy Day this year finds our Sure Shield busy and alert.

It is a proud history that the bluejackets of Uncle Sam have inherited from the sailors of the past, for the beginnings of our navy go back to the days of Drake and the Spanish armada. Even the uniforms of our sailors with the white-lined blue collars mark the doings of naval men in the dim past and denote our seafaring ancestry. It is a far cry from the ships of oak to the ships of steel, yet the character of the men who man those ships has changed but little with the march of time.

So it is fitting to pause a moment today to give thought to the men who go down to sea in ships and guard our far-flung coast lines. The people will pray that their mission may ever be one of peace, but the people know that if this is not to be a sure reliance may be placed on the guardians of our borders. They did not fail us in the past and stand ready to carry on today as did the men of sail and muzzle-loader. Stand by to come about and give a salute to our sailors! It's Jack's own day!
